Shultz given final word about talks

By TERENCE HUNT
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan gave final instructions Friday to Secretary of State George P. Shultz on the eve of his departure for new arms control talks, as the administration boasted of strong support in Congress for the "Star Wars" anti-missile program that will be a centerpiece of any U.S.-Soviet negotiations.

Shultz leaves Washington late today for Geneva, where he is to meet Monday and Tuesday with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko to try to arrange an agenda for resuming arms talks that broke off more than a year ago.

Among those traveling in Shultz's delegation will be Reagan's national security adviser, Robert C. McFarlane, and U.S. arms negotiator

Paul Nitze.

At a morning meeting at the White House, Reagan, Shultz and McFarlane briefed congressional leaders on the secretary's mission and urged them to support the administration's bargaining stance and defense buildup, and thus help keep pressure on the Soviets to negotiate.

The administration says Reagan will not give up research on the Star Wars system, arguing the Soviet Union already is engaged in work on a similar program that would give Moscow an advantage. The Soviet Union has demanded the United States halt testing of anti-satellite weapons and abandon research on the anti-missile system.

An administration official said Thursday Shultz would take up questionable Soviet radar and anti-aircraft measures with Gromyko but it was not the "central theme" of their two-day meeting.

White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said House Democratic Leader James Wright spoke up at the meeting in praise of the missile defense plan — officially known as the Strategic Defense Initiative — and that other congressional leaders indicated similar feelings.

"I would say there was a nodding approval around the table," Speakes said. Twenty-six members of the House and Senate, Republicans and Democrats alike, were invited to the White House meeting in the Cabinet Room.

"I think if the leadership is a reflection of what Congress' thinking is on the subject of SDI, it has a very receptive audience in Congress," said Speakes. "They seemed to think the defensive concept was quite an innovative approach that could bear fruit in the future."

Senators claim 64 violations

By HENRY GOTTLEB
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three conservative senators on Friday accused the Soviet Union of 64 major violations of strategic arms control agreements and urged President Reagan to put off further negotiations until the cheating stops.

Writing to Reagan as the United States is about to embark on new preliminary discussions with the Soviets in Geneva, the senators also repeated charges that American arms control advocates — in their eagerness for new agreements — are trying to cover up the Soviet violations.

"We urge you to have Secretary of State George Shultz press upon Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in Geneva the absolute necessity of ending Soviet SALT violations as a precondition to serious negotiation," wrote Republicans James P. East of Mississippi, Jesse Helms of North Carolina and Steve Symms of Idaho.

Attached to their letter was a list of what they said were 43 unclassified violations of two strategic arms limitation treaties—SALT I—was ratified by both sides in 1972. SALT II was never ratified by the United States, but both sides say they are complying with its terms.

The major violation, they said, was Soviet failure to deactivate over 500 nuclear delivery systems to come down to the SALT II level of 2,250.

The senators said several other violations have been made public, but were not included in the reports to the Congress. The alleged violations included:

- Putting 14 warheads on Soviet SS-18s, their largest land-based missiles, while SALT II permits only 10.
- Disregarding a provision of a 1971 agreement to prevent the risk of war, by jamming U.S. early warning systems without notification.
- Adding illegal missile bays to a new class of submarines.
- Disregarding five promises to limit the effectiveness of the Backfire bomber, the Soviets' most sophisticated bomber. The senators, quoting public testimony by administration officials, said the Soviets produced 35 Backfires a year, rather than limiting numbers to 30 a year.

Jury chosen for Lafferty trial

By MICHAEL WHITE
The Associated Press

PROVO, Utah — A jury of six men and six women was empaneled Friday to decide the first-degree murder trial of Dan Lafferty, charged with his brother Ron in the slaying of his sister-in-law and her infant daughter.

The jurors, along with two male alternates, were empaneled late Friday afternoon after two days of interviews that involved a pool of 100 prospects who appeared for interviews with Lafferty, who is conducting his own defense, prosecutors and 4th District Judge J. Robert Bullock.

Bullock sent the jury home after admonishing them to refrain from discussing the case and from reading or watching news accounts.

Dan Lafferty, who took an active role in questioning the prospective jurors, said afterwards he was pleased with the final product.

"All of them professed to be Christian. I would expect... that would infer they would be a fair jury. If not, then they would be hypocrites," Lafferty said during a brief news conference called after the jury was sent home.

Dan Lafferty and Ron Lafferty, excommunicated Mormons who belonged to a "School of the Prophets" and claim to have received revelation, are accused of killing Brenda Wright Lafferty, 24, and her 15-month-old daughter Erica. The victims were found July 24 in their American Fork home. The woman was a native of Kimberly, Idaho.

Soviets admit an old missile strayed

By RISTO MAENPAA
The Associated Press

HELSINKI, Finland — The Soviet Union said Friday an old, unarmed

Soviet cruise missile strayed during a firing exercise a week ago and may have flown over Finland and Norway.

The Oslo government said the Soviets expressed their regrets.

Moscow's statement, and apology, made by its ambassadors to Norway and Finland, came two days after Norway said a low-flying projectile passed over Norwegian territory and disappeared in Finland on Dec. 28. No trace of the missile has been found.

The Soviet envoy to Oslo, the Norwegian capital, was quoted as saying an unarmed target drone launched from a Soviet ship during firing exercises in the Barents Sea had malfunctioned and might have violated Finnish and Norwegian airspace.

Norwegian Foreign Minister Sverre Stray said Soviet Ambassador Dmitri Polyanski expressed his government's regrets over the incident, and told him the intruding missile was "an old Soviet cruise missile" used as a target drone.

Stray said Norway now considers the case closed. "This apology on the Soviet ambassador's part improved relations between Norway and the Soviet Union and also between East and West," he said in Oslo.

In his announcement, the Finnish Foreign Ministry did not specify the type of projectile discussed by V.M. Sobolev, the Soviet ambassador to Finland.

"While having firing exercises, a firing target had because of a technical fault strayed from its given course," the ministry statement quoted Sobolev as reporting.

"He said it might have been possi-

New Idaho Legislature appears unknown quantity

By KALYAN KENYON
The Associated Press

BOISE — Like the election that put its members into office, the new Idaho Legislature is full of unknowns.

It's going to be the first time for many things, with new committees functioning for the first time, many new committee chairmen and women and Republicans in full control with a "veto proof" majority in both chambers.

One-third of the lawmakers are newcomers. Their political views won't be clear until they start counting the votes.

And there are unprecedented numbers of lawmakers, 84 tightly fitted into a House designed for far fewer members and 42 in the Senate.

It wasn't easy to predict what would happen in the primary and general election last year. Because of court decisions and partisan political deadlocks, Idaho voters, and the candidates themselves, didn't know until the last minute who would be running in what district.

That confusion, and the creation of 21 new legislative positions, has produced many new faces this year.

And there are two new committees in the House. Environmental Affairs is headed by one of that chamber's most conservative members, Rep. Lyman Gene Winchester, R-Kuna.

The new Commerce, Industry and Tourism Committee is headed by moderate Dorothy Reynolds, R-Caldwell.

Tourism looks strong — A10

For many years, the Senate's Health, Education and Welfare panel was headed by John Barker, a Republican from Buhl. But he's retired now, and the Senate split that panel into two new committees, one for health and welfare and another for education.

Regardless of the new faces, House Speaker Tom Silvers will remain in firm control of the House, and Senate President Pro Tem James Risch will make the major Senate policy decisions.

Silvers staved off a major challenge from moderate Steve Antone of Rupert to win his second term as House speaker. And the conservative Silvers predicts that many of the newcomers also will be conservatives, which will cement his position of strength.

Risch hasn't been opposed the past few years as the Senate's top administrator. But Majority Leader Mark Ricks of Rexburg may play an increasingly important role in policy decisions.

Ricks has held important assignments within the Mormon Church, and there are 14 Mormons in the Senate, one-third of the membership.

Reapportionment may be an interesting subject this session.

Lengthy battles finally produced a court-approved legislative redistricting plan that expanded the Legislature by 14 House members and 7 senators. Included were seven huge "floating" districts covering large areas.

GOP senators ready to draft own budget

By W. DALE NELSON
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Republican senators decided Friday to write their own budget before President Reagan sends his to Congress, saying the administration appears to be falling short of its goal of cutting the federal deficit in half within three years.

Senate Majority Leader Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., emerging from a meeting of GOP senators with Budget Committee Director David A. Stockman and White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III, said Senate Republican leaders and committee chairmen will begin work on the document next Wednesday.

Dole said he asked the group to submit a budget proposal to him by Feb. 1.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the Reagan budget is expected to be submitted to Congress the first week in February, probably before the State of the Union Address on Feb. 6.

A number of senators said the administration spokesmen indicated at the meeting that they would not be able to reduce the deficit by half, to $100 billion, by 1983 as they have said that they hoped to do.

"It is my understanding that the amount will be a little bit higher," Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., said. Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., chairman of the Senate GOP Policy Committee, said there had been "a little slippage" as to whether they can get there in 1983 or 1984.

"What I have learned is that there is some question in the administration's mind as to how fast they can get there," Armstrong said.

Baker, asked after the meeting whether the administration was still sticking to the $100 billion goal, said, "I think the budget the president is working on now will shoot for that goal." Baker referred queries about figures to Stockman, who was not available.

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — The North Dakota Supreme Court ruled Friday that George Sinner legally became governor on Jan. 1, despite arguments by the man he defeated in the election that his term does not expire until Saturday.

The five justices, four of whom held temporary appointments to hear the case, heard nearly an hour of arguments Friday morning before announcing their unanimous decision.

"The decision is that George Sinner is and has been the governor of North Dakota since the first moments of Jan. 1, 1985," Chief Justice Ralph Erickstad said. "The court has therefore granted the original writ enjoining Allen T. Olson from exercising the powers of governor of North Dakota."

The decision did not specify what effect it may have on any executive actions Olson may have taken since Jan. 1.

Before the court convened, the staff already had prepared drafts of two opinions, one ruling in favor of Sinner, a Democrat, and the other for Olson, Erickstad said.

"The court has studied both drafts and concluded unanimously that the decision should be for Mr. Sinner," Erickstad said.

Olson, a Republican, had handed over the keys to his office to Sinner at the Capitol later in the afternoon, said Thomas Forsythe, Olson's press secretary.

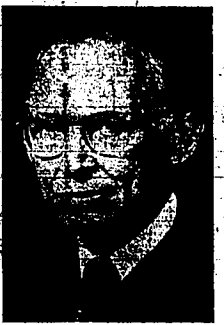

Olson said he would issue a statement after he has had time to read the opinion.

Olson had claimed that tradition and the state's Constitution dictated that he stay until at least Saturday, when his four-year term expires, or Tuesday, when the new Legislature convenes.

However, Sinner, who defeated Olson on Nov. 6, signed his oath of office Monday, claiming he had the authority to become governor on New Year's Day.

At stake is the chance to appoint two judges to the state's highest court.

"Our bureaucracy cannot act without specific direction from its executive," Attorney General Nicholas Spaeth said.

LEWIS POWELL Hospitalized

Powell has surgery for cancer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court Justice Lewis F. Powell underwent surgery for prostate cancer Friday.

He was reported in excellent condition.

Powell, 77, is expected to remain in the Rochester, Minn., Methodist Hospital for 10 days to two weeks, the Supreme Court public information office said.

Toni House, spokeswoman for the court, said the cancer was discovered during a recent routine physical check-up.

She said she had no further details on the surgery or what further treatment if any Powell will receive.

Powell, the third oldest member of the high court, generally has enjoyed good health since he was appointed to the court in 1971 at age 64 by then-President Richard M. Nixon. However, a benign tumor was removed from his colon in 1979.

Friday's surgery was performed by Dr. David Uje of the Mayo Foundation, which is affiliated with Rochester Methodist Hospital.

Ms. House said that Powell is expected to resume his duties on the bench in February.

Powell is two days younger than Chief Justice Warren Burger and more than a year younger than Justice William J. Brennan, at 78 the oldest member of the court.

'84 voter turnout up slightly

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — After two decades of declining turnout, the percentage of Americans who went to the polls to elect the president increased slightly in 1984, new figures from the states showed Friday.

The Federal Election Commission, which gathered the final certified vote counts from every state, said 62,651,042 people cast votes for president, or 53.27 percent of the voting age population, estimated by the Census Bureau at 117,938,000.

The FEC, in a news release, claimed the turnout was "slightly lower than in 1980," when 68,495,678 votes were cast out of what the commission said was an estimated voting age population of 160,316,000. This would have amounted to a 55.9 percent turnout.

But other experts said the FEC mistakenly used the wrong population figure for 1980.

The FEC attributed the figure to the Census Bureau, but Census has revised its estimate of the 1980 voting-age population to 184,473,000, according to Martin O'Connell, the official in charge of those estimates. That made the 1980 turnout 52.6 percent.

President Reagan received 54,451,521 votes, or 52.7 percent; his Democratic rival, Walter F. Mondale, 37,565,334, or 40.54 percent; and 634,187, or 0.69 percent, were scattered among 15 minor party candidates or write-ins, the FEC said.

To the dismay of politicians and pundits, the percentage of Americans who go to the polls has fallen from its historic high of 62.8 percent in the tightly contested 1960 race between John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon to 55.2 percent in 1972, 53.5 percent in 1976 and 52.6 percent in 1980, giving the United States one of the lowest voter turnouts of any democratic country.

Curtis Gans, director of the non-partisan Center for the Study of the American Electorate, said, "You've got to be happy when it's going up after 20 years of decline."

But he said he had expected a bigger turnout, given the sharp differences between Reagan and Mondale and the "extensive efforts both parties made to register new voters."

Gans criticized the FEC for using the out-of-date figure for the 1980 voting age population. "They're wrong," he said. "That's the figure (the Census Bureau) had in 1980 before revising it in light of the census."

FEC spokesman Fred Eiland defended his agency's use of the unrevisted figure. "We don't revise it."

We do it one time and that's it. Whatever we put out in 1980, that's what we're going on," he said.

The third-party vote was off sharply in 1984 from recent elections, the FEC said.

Libertarian David Bergland led the minor-party group with 227,168 votes, followed by Lyndon H. LaRouche Jr., who ran as an independent, with 78,773; and feminist Sonia Johnson, the Citizens Party candidate, with 71,947.

Also, Bob Richards, Populist 66,168; Dennis L. Serrette, Independent Alliance, 58,898; Gus Hall, Communist, 35,215; Mel Mason, Socialist Workers, 24,672; Larry Holmes, Workers World, 15,327; Ed Winn, Workers League, 14,363; Delmar Dennis, American, 13,149; Earl E. Dodge, Prohibition, 4,235; Gavriel Holmes, Workers World, 2,641; John B. Anderson, National Unity Party of Kentucky, 1,479; Gerald Baker, Big Deal, 821; and Arthur J. Lowery, United Sovereign Citizens, 822.

In addition, 17,438 write-in votes were tabulated.

Alice McGillivray of the private Elections Research Center said that "usually, the percentage of people who went to the polls is two points higher than the percentage who voted for president."

Reagan got more popular and electoral votes than any presidential candidate in U.S. history, but his margin trailed Lyndon Johnson's victory with 61 percent of the vote in 1964 and 60 percent landslides, by Franklin D.

Roosevelt in 1936, Nixon in 1972 and Warren G. Harding in 1920.

Reagan got 16,888,187 more votes than Mondale, according to the figures gathered by the FEC. His victory will become official on Monday at a ceremonial joint session of Congress, when Vice President George Bush will open the ballots cast by the 538 members of the Electoral College on Dec. 17. Mondale captured only 13 electoral votes.

The FEC's count for Reagan and Mondale differed by 9,255 votes from a tally reported last month by The Associated Press, primarily due to Mondale's getting 9,000 fewer votes in Washington state. There were also small differences in the figures for Arizona, Nebraska, New York, Ohio and Rhode Island.

O'Connell, chief of the Census Bureau's fertility statistics branch, said the voting age population figure is "just a body count. It will include every single person 18 or older" regardless of whether they are entitled to vote.

Gans said, "It includes aliens, convicted felons and people in mental institutions who cannot vote, and it doesn't include Americans abroad who can."

But he said it is "the only comparative figure that goes all the way back. If you took the aliens out, you'd probably end up with a 1 percent increase nationally in turnout."

Light-weight nuclear bombs may be used in Europe, says analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. special operations forces have been trained to carry light-weight nuclear bombs and place them behind enemy lines in the event of a war in Europe, with the Soviet Union, a top research analyst says.

William M. Arkin, the director of the Arms Race and Nuclear Weapons Research Project at the Institute for Policy Studies, said Friday the existence of the light-weight bombs — known as Special Atomic Demolition Munitions — has been known for years.

But what has now become apparent, he added, is that the United States and its allies have decided not to retire the special bombs from a European stockpile, and to give special operations units the responsibility and training to place them behind enemy lines in the event of war.

"We've known for some time that the United States had two small atomic munitions in its arsenal — a larger one dubbed the medium- and one called the special that can be carried by one man," Arkin said. "But we were never sure why there were two kinds."

"More recently, it has become clear that the special is solely for the use of commandos and that it's going to remain in our European stockpile," he added. "It's certainly the most bizarre nuclear weapon in our arsenal. And since it's for use behind enemy lines, that certainly doesn't spell deterrence in any terms."

The existence of the Special Atomic Demolition Munition, or "backpack nuke" in military jargon, was spotlighted last January when Arkin and two co-authors published a new compendium of U.S. nuclear forces.

Drawing on congressional testimony and information from Pentagon sources, the reference book said the small nuclear bombs were first produced in 1963, that the warhead weighs only about 38 pounds; and that about 300 remained in the U.S. arsenal.

The weapons became the subject of renewed scrutiny following a report Thursday evening by the NBC Nightly News. NBC said it had learned that special operations commandos in Bad Reichenhagen, West Germany, had been trained in European languages, customs, sabotage and the use of the backpack nukes.

"In a big way, they would drop behind Soviet lines and organize resistance movements," NBC reported. "(And) there are 100 of these backpack nuclear weapons in West Germany."

"The backpack nukes would be set off by remote control (after placement) to destroy targets such as airfields and Soviet command sites."

AIDS virus may not be detected in screening test for some carriers

BOSTON (AP) — Screening tests intended to protect blood banks from the suspected AIDS virus may miss some tainted blood because seemingly healthy people can carry the germ in their bodies without producing telltale antibodies, a new study shows.

The screening tests used the presence of antibodies to HTLV-3, the virus believed to cause the fatal disease. Experts had assumed that anyone who has been exposed to the AIDS virus will carry those antibodies in the bloodstream. But the new work shows that is not always true.

In a study published in a recent issue of the Journal Lancet, doctors describe two men and two women — all sexual partners of AIDS victims — who carry the AIDS virus but produce no detectable antibodies against it.

In fact, Samuel Speck of the agency told a news conference, earthquakes in the eastern United States tend to cause damage in much larger areas than those in the West.

Agencies want earthquake studies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four federal agencies, saying that most of the nation — not just the West — can be hit by earthquakes, sent to Congress on Friday a detailed five-year plan on ways it seeks to cut quake damage and loss of life.

In this century alone, the Federal Emergency Management Agency said, earthquakes in the United States have claimed 1,380 lives and caused more than $5 billion in property damage.

"Damaging earthquakes have occurred in just every region of the country," the agency said. "The population of 44 states and territories, with a total population of well over 70 million people, is at risk from moderate to severe earthquakes."

In fact, Samuel Speck of the agency told a news conference, earthquakes in the eastern United States tend to cause damage in much larger areas than those in the West.

"We're talking about an earthquake which would impact on some 21 states," he said. "If it were of the magnitude of a series of earthquakes that took place in 1811-1812 (in New Madrid, Mo.) it could affect some 21 million people and cause property damage estimated at some $50 billion."

The plan, envisions spending $363 million for such things as earthquake prediction research, assessment of earthquake hazards, research in design of structures.

A bicyclist rides on the grounds of the Imperial Palace in Hue, one of Vietnam's most beautiful cities.

Under siege during the 1968 Tet offensive

Ancient city has seen kings, combat

Editor's note: The ancient Citadel of Hue still is marked by the bullet holes of the 1968 Tet offensive, when 142 U.S. Marines died in house-to-house combat. This report on Hue today is by George Esper, who was the last bureau chief for The Associated Press in Saigon. It is one in a series of periodic reports from Esper's first return visit to Vietnam in 10 years.

By GEORGE ESPER
The Associated Press

HUE, Vietnam — Emperors sat in the old imperial capital of Hue in ancient times. The U.S. Marines fought there in modern times.

Hue, with its tree-lined streets and Perfume River, is one of Vietnam's most beautiful cities. It is also one of the largest with a population of more than 300,000.

The ancient imperial capital was established more than 200 years before Christ and was the seat of the Old Annam empire for 21 centuries.

The Vietnamese flag, red with a yellow star, flies from the flag tower of the king atop the Citadel.

The Citadel's walls and the old Imperial palace within the fortress bear the scars of years of wear and war. North Vietnamese troops held out in the Citadel for nearly a month during their 1968 Tet Lunar New Year offensive.

The walls and ceiling of the Pavilion of Five Dragons, where kings' festivals were held, are pockmarked with bullet and shell holes.

Across a bridge over a man-made lake is the Imperial palace itself. The pillars of Peace Hall, where ceremonies were held and the kings received representatives from other countries, are dotted with shell holes.

Near the king's throne are pools of water from a leaky roof that has been shared up temporarily with timber and aluminum while Communist officials await funds from the United Nations for restoration.

The Vietnamese have already repaired gaping holes in the outer walls of the Citadel caused by the fighting which destroyed an estimated 70 percent of Hue's homes and many historical treasures.

U.S. Marines suffered 142 men killed as they fought house-to-house with South Vietnamese allies in 1968 to recapture the city.

But Hue, with the rest of South Vietnam, fell to the north in 1975, two years after American forces had left for good.

Communist officials say thousands of Vietnamese gathered in the Citadel on April 30, 1975, to celebrate the fall of the Saigon government.

Over the years, the city has been rebuilt. Except for the Citadel, little damage is visible.

Hue is the home of four universities, a performing arts theater for dance and music, and more than 70 light industries, communist officials say.

It is also the city where one of the most gruesome political purges of the war occurred during the 1968 Tet offensive.

The communists executed more than 2,800 residents, including civil servants, teachers, priests and military personnel. Some were shot. Many were buried alive. Their bodies were dug up after the siege ended.

Arafat reports on Austrian peace plan

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — Former Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky has proposed merging all existing Middle East peace plans into one "European Initiative" to resolve the Arab-Israeli conflict, PLO

Chairman Yasser Arafat said Friday. Kreisky's proposal will be "studied at the highest levels" of the Palestine Liberation Organization, Arafat told the United Arab Emirates news agency WAM.

Wreckage search delayed by storm

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Heavy rain mixed with snow fell on Illimani Mountain Friday, forcing mountaineers, journalists and a U.S. diplomat to suspend their search for an Eastern Airlines plane that crashed with 29 people aboard.

However, three experienced Bolivian climbers continued up the mountain.

A group of rescuers who returned to La Paz said it may take a week or longer to reach the wreckage of Eastern flight 960, but the Bolivian climbers said they hoped to reach the plane on Saturday.

The Eastern Boeing 727 slammed into the snow-covered peak on Tuesday, minutes before it was to land in La Paz. Officials say there is no hope that any of the passengers are still alive.

A team of mountaineers and journalists reached a height of about 18,810 feet on the 21,000-foot mountain before being forced back Friday by bad weather, said Ricardo Albert, a mountaineer who led the group. The wreckage was spotted Wednesday at about 19,400 feet.

Team members said they examined glaciers below the crash site for debris, but found none.

U.S. Consul Royce Fichte, an experienced mountaineer, began climbing the mountain Thursday afternoon, returned to his base camp Friday because of the bad weather and the difficulty of the climb, said Steve Seche, a spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in La Paz.

The three veteran Bolivian climbers who were with him continued up the mountain and said by radio that they hoped to reach the crash site on Saturday. The climbers included Bernardo Guarachi, who has led more than 30 expeditions up the mountain. His team was at about 18,150 feet on Friday.

A Red Cross team also began climbing the mountain on Thursday, but it turned back after several hours because of hail, rain and fog.

Meanwhile, officials said a Bolivian helicopter had tried to drop mountaineers high on the mountain, in the hope that they could slide down to the wreckage. But they said that effort also failed because of the weather.

The Eastern jetliner crashed on a flight from Asuncion, Paraguay, to La Paz and Miami. Just before the plane disappeared, its pilot contacted El Alto airport by radio, but reported no problems.

At 12,000 feet, La Paz is the highest capital in the world and the approach to the airport is over craggy, snowcapped mountains. The landing Tuesday would have been the second there for the pilot, Capt. Larry Campbell. Eastern spokeswoman Denise Baker said.

Negligence caused by gas leak, says official

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Negligence by Union Carbide Corp. caused the gas leak from a Bhopal pesticide plant that killed more than 2,000 people and injured 60,000, a top government scientist was quoted as saying Friday.

Dr. S. Varadarajan, director-general of the government's Council of Scientific and Industrial Research, said the U.S.-based multinational company had been manufacturing lethal methyl isocyanate gas in its plant without adequate safety measures or contingency plans for a leak, Indian news media reported.

The Hindustan Times, New Delhi's largest circulation newspaper, quoted the scientist as saying some control instruments at the plant were examined by a team from the scientific council and were found to be faulty.

But in his reported speech to the Indian Science Congress in the northern city of Lucknow, Varadarajan did not explain what caused the Dec. 3 gas leak.

Tom Fallis, a company spokesman at Union Carbide's headquarters in Danbury, Conn., said Friday: "We will not comment at all on the cause of the accident because our investigation is not complete. Our technical team has returned from India. They may have to go back for additional information."

The Hindustan Times quoted Varadarajan as saying that cracks in the concrete covers of the underground storage tank may have been caused by factory workers attempting to stop the leak by allowing fresh air to cool the evaporating methyl isocyanate.

Cambodians flee possible battle site

AMPIL, Cambodia (AP) — In long, weary lines, more than 23,000 civilians trekked deeper into Thailand on Friday, away from the Cambodian resistance stronghold at Ampil where a major Vietnamese assault is expected within days.

Describing Vietnamese preparations, a Thai general said the attack was shaping up to be the biggest clash in the six years since the troops from Hanoi invaded Cambodia.

The Thai Foreign Ministry in Bangkok said Vietnamese air strikes were expected against guerrilla resistance along the border. "They could attack very soon," a ministry spokesman said Friday.

Thai army officers and guerrilla leaders said there was relatively little fighting along the border Friday, but that the Vietnamese were resupplying units at Rithkean camp and reinforcing those facing Ampil for an attack expected on or before Monday, Jan. 7.

That is the sixth anniversary of Vietnam's takeover of Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital, where they replaced the Communist Khmer Rouge government of Pol Pot with the Heng Samrin regime.

A coalition of three anti-Vietnamese guerrilla organizations, including anti-communists and the Khmer Rouge, is fighting the Heng Samrin government and its Vietnamese allies.

Thailand's 1st Army regional commander, Lt. Gen. Fichitr Kullavanijaya, said Friday that Vietnam has readied five regiments, helicopter gunships, Antonov-26 supply planes, tanks and artillery for the assault on Ampil.

He told reporters after a tour of border installations that the battle was shaping up as the biggest clash in six years of war and was likely to spill over both sides of the frontier.

Associated Press correspondents at the scene saw throngs of refugees, trailed by their water buffaloes, pigs and household pets, move off under a blazing sun at 8 a.m.

Most walked, although some had their belongings stacked high on ox-carts. Others pushed small children on bicycles. Mothers kept pace with breast-feeding babies.

Clouds of dust swirled behind the columns in the now familiar scene of civilians trying to stay out of the way of Cambodian combat.

Priest's death plagues lieutenant's conscience

TORUN, Poland (AP) — A secret police lieutenant charged with murder in the death of a pro-Solidarity priest testified Friday that he cooperated with investigators because he could not live with the "frightful and cruel" slaying on his conscience.

Lt. Waldemar Komciewski, 29, one of four secret police officers charged in the abduction and slaying of the Rev. Jerzy Popieluszko, also said he had been assured he would not be prosecuted because Interior Ministry officials investigating the case were "good guys."

He said he felt exploited by his superiors and testified repeatedly that he never intended to kill Popieluszko.

"No one can live with that on his conscience," he said. "It was frightful and cruel. No reasonable man could cover it up. It is beyond human capability."

Western reporters allowed inside the courtroom said Komciewski — who faces a possible death penalty if convicted — wept at one point and said, "For all practical purposes I have lost my family."

His wife, who is expecting a baby next month, sat in the courtroom. "I had my life," he continued, apologizing to the judges for losing his composure. "I now realize that the priest also had a family. That people suffer. You cannot hide that."

Popieluszko's two brothers, Jozef and Stanislaw, also sat in the audience. Polish authorities granted passes to seven Western correspondents to attend the trial but denied access to The Associated Press, citing lack of space. Correspondents who were in the courtroom provided the AP with their notes and the AP has protested the government's exclusion of an AP correspondent.

Komciewski was still on the stand when the fifth day of the trial ended. Komciewski repeated the claims of the only other defendant to testify so far, Lt. Leszek Pekala, that their commanding officer assured them they would not be caught because members of a commission investigating the slaying would protect them.

Gearing up for legislative session

State Sen. Laird Noh shared some of his views with press club members Friday.

Noh says public school programs may survive

By DEAN S. MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Funding for the Idaho public school teacher career ladder program will most likely survive the budget cutting in this year's legislature, according to Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly.

Speaking to a Sawtooth Press Club gathering Friday in Twin Falls, Noh said there are many who "spend countless hours" developing local district career ladders who will not let the Legislature do away with funding.

"Folks have forgotten it was not just a financial package," Noh said. The career ladder legislation contained a trade-off in which teachers were forced to accept performance evaluation in return for the opportunity for better pay.

Noh said he thinks the career ladder program will be funded before the second phase of the teacher equity program will be funded.

As many as 20 school districts around the state will participate in the career ladder program, says Noh. The State Board of Education will have to be hard-nosed to eliminate ill-conceived career ladder plans from districts simply in line for money, said Noh.

Increased support for higher education will stand high on the agenda, as legislators seek to rescue the State Pharmacy college and shore up the budget of the higher education system while remaining true to promises of fiscal conservatism, Noh said.

Assessing the upcoming legislative session, Noh said the backdrop of the 1986 general elections and the large number of freshman legislators will determine the character of this legislative session.

Noh said, for instance, Gov. John Evans' proposed budget indicates he is already running against fiscal conservative Sen. Steve Symms.

"The freshmen will be the wild card in the whole process," Noh said. "New faces with no voting records will appear on the Revenue and Tax, Health and Welfare, and Education committees of the House of Representatives. "No one really knows how these people will vote," he said.

Last year, the Revenue and Tax committee was paralyzed by split votes over numerous measures. Noh says new members of that committee may break up the deadlock.

Outlining legislation of local interest, Noh said he will introduce, on behalf of a group of Magic Valley farmers, a bill to give the State Department of Water Resources responsibility for flood control dams in the event of an officially declared state of emergency due to flooding.

As chairman of the Senate committee on resources and environment, Noh said his main responsibility in the up-coming session will be the management of the Swan Falls agreement.

There has not been a great deal of hostility to the agreement so far, he said, though some irrigation districts in the Boise Valley are seeking exemption from the general adjudication provisions of the agreement.

The Idaho Water User's Association and the Department of Water Resources are cooperating on a bill that Noh said he hopes will include stronger penalties for the waste of geothermal resources and will more narrowly define beneficial use. Noh said he will closely monitor the progress of that bill.

Concerning the prospect of a right-to-work bill for Idaho, Noh said he and Senate colleagues are "looking for a narrowly-drawn bill that doesn't do any more damage than it has to."

Day-care regulation should be handled by the department of Health and Welfare, where the expertise already exists, Noh said. A bill to regulate day care centers stands a better chance of passage this year due to much-publicized instances of child abuse, he said.

Cassia paying off on flood

OAKLEY (AP) — With concern again mounting about the possible recurrence of a flood threat below Oakley Dam, Cassia County officials have finally started compensating farmers for damages they suffered during last spring's battle against high water.

"The attitude of the people in this community has been business," said Grant Wyatt, who headed the private fund-raising drive to cover claims for damage to land and crops from the 23-mile emergency diversion channel construction last spring to siphon water from the Lower Goose Creek Reservoir so it would not flow over the dam and flood homes and farms below.

So far, some $300,000 has been distributed to 35 or 40 farmers, who in return agreed to drop any further claims for damages against local governments.

The fund-raising effort, which drew contributions from local businesses, civic and religious groups and residents, was prompted after damage claims mounted into the hundreds of thousands of dollars. At the same time, local officials were saddled with more than $1 million in bills for the actual work needed to construct the diversion channel and another canal to take pressure off the reservoir.

County property taxes have been boosted significantly to cover those bills, but private funds were needed to insure damage compensation.

While the area is still coping with the aftermath of last spring's threat, officials are casting a leary eye toward this spring. Although the reservoir is only half full now, the same level it was a year ago, the snowpack in the area is again running above historic levels, raising prospects for another high runoff this spring.

"There's still a lot of winter left yet," said Jerry Beard of the state Soil Conservation Service office. "A lot of things can change between now and spring, but that's about where we stand now."

With the prospects for a renewed flood threat uncertain, the two new flood control districts in the county are pressing for resolution of legal problems that have blocked government financing for flood control projects they have planned to alleviate future high-water problems.

Those districts have been left without taxing authority because they were created after the deadline for certification of tax rates last fall.

But some of their financial problems could be eased if another bond fund-raising effort decides to use the $400,000 it has collected to help the districts out.

"There's been no decision made by the Oakley Dam Flood Committee," said John Evans Jr. That group is considering splitting the money it's raised between the two new flood control districts.

Stivers: some state employees will lose jobs

BOISE (AP) — The 1985 Idaho Legislature that convenes on Monday will not change the tax structure or raise tax assessments, but it might put some state employees out of work so programs can be financed, says House Speaker Tom Stivers, R-Twin Falls.

Stivers maintains an average 10 percent of state employees he considers non-productive could be laid off in such departments as Health and Welfare, Education, and Revenue and Taxation. Up to 15 percent of the employees in some Health and Welfare Department programs could be eliminated, said Stivers, who announced months ago that he had received reports about poor productivity in some parts of state government.

Some state programs established 10 to 15 years ago probably could be eliminated, Stivers said Thursday.

The Department of Revenue and Taxation has proposed collecting taxes from YMCA and Camp Fire groups, Stivers said. If that is all the department's employees have to do, some of them can be eliminated, he said.

Stivers predicted that the Legislature would lay off state employees if it became evident that needed programs could not be financed.

He said he expects the Legislature to be working with only about 5 percent more revenue than the state will receive this fiscal year. The Twin Falls Republican said he hopes the Legislature can fund fully the second half of the salary-equity program for teachers, passed in 1984, and raise funding for higher education.

Correcting problems at the state penitentiary should not take as high a priority, Stivers said. He said the Legislature should take steps to comply with U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan's order that the state improve security and medical programs at the prison south of Boise. But the problems don't have to be solved overnight, Stivers said during taping of the KTVB-TV "Viewpoint" program.

"It's pretty easy for a federal judge to sit there with a lifetime job and an agreed salary to tell the state of Idaho what they've got to do immediately," he said.

Many of the problems Ryan noted were brought to his attention by a prison inmate, Stivers said.

"I don't think a prisoner, criminal of that type should be given much censure or consideration in his views of what needs to be done at that state prison," he said.

Ryan issued his order in November after a class-action suit was filed by two inmates.

Jarbridge plan gets revision

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

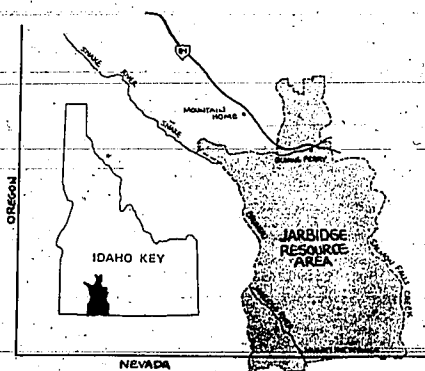

BOISE — The U.S. Bureau of Land Management now is changing its 20-year plan for the vast Jarbridge Resource Area to increase improvements for poor rangeland greatly.

After fielding objections from ranchers and other groups at recent hearings, the federal agency now will try to upgrade 40 percent of the 799,416 acres ranked in poor condition instead of the 6 percent originally proposed, said Gary Carson, the BLM's Jarbridge area manager.

BLM officials have proposed a management plan and drafted an environmental impact statement for the Jarbridge Resource Area, which stretches across 1.6 million acres in Twin Falls, Elmore and Owyhee counties and a small section of Nevada.

The plan includes a number of proposals, including wilderness areas for grazing, management, range improvement work and wildlife habitat improvement work," he said. Any work done would depend on available federal funds, he said.

Carson also said Thursday the agency most likely will not attempt to add any plateau land to proposed wilderness areas including the West work in the proposed action," Carson said. "We're going to treat up to 2 percent of that poor condition range on an annual basis, and that treatment will be a combination of improved grazing, management, range improvement work and wildlife habitat improvement work," he said. Any work done would depend on available federal funds, he said.

Carson also said Thursday the agency most likely will not attempt to add any plateau land to proposed wilderness areas including the West

Fork of the Bruneau River and the Jarbridge River. The wilderness designations were debated in many letters, he said, and some conservation-oriented groups had suggested adding a large amount of tabletop land east of the Jarbridge River. Some land west of the river already is included.

To date, BLM has received about 60 letters reacting to the proposal. The response is far less than the usual 150 to 200 for a land-use plan, Carson said. Friday was the deadline for submitting comments on the plan.

Dog puts car into reverse; runs over, injures owner

TWIN FALLS — A filer man was seriously injured Friday morning when he was struck by his own van after his dog put the vehicle into reverse.

Rehe, Helmut Schatz, 64, of 709 Yakima St., suffered broken ribs in the accident, which took place Friday shortly after 9 a.m., near Filer and Locust Streets in Twin Falls.

Schatz had parked his van on the 400 block of Locust Street North near the office of KTRB radio station. He had left the motor running and went to the back of the van, reported Twin Falls police officer Dave Heidemann.

According to witnesses, a small dog inside the van apparently hit or jumped onto the gear on the steering column and the van jerked into reverse. The vehicle knocked down the van over Schatz, who was standing at the rear of the van, Heidemann said.

The van then crossed Locust Street, jumped a curb, hit a fence and came to rest on a lawn near Filer Avenue.

Schatz was taken by ambulance to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. He was in critical condition in the hospital's intensive care unit.

Heidemann said the investigation on the accident has been completed.

New sentence ordered for man convicted in lewd conduct charge

BOISE (AP) — Because a prosecutor went back on an agreement reached in plea-bargaining negotiations, a new sentence has been ordered for a man convicted on a Jerome County sex charge.

Norman Glenn Rutherford was sentenced to life imprisonment after pleading guilty to lewd conduct with a minor. But the Idaho Court of Appeals on Thursday ordered a new sentencing proceeding because a prosecutor recommended a fixed life imprisonment term.

The court said Rutherford agreed to plead guilty to one sex charge, in return for an agreement that the state would drop a second lewd conduct charge in Twin Falls County and burglary and theft charges.

The plea-bargaining agreement also included a commitment that the prosecutor would not recommend a fixed life imprisonment term.

At sentencing, a different prosecutor handled the case, recommending a fixed life imprisonment term and 5th-District Judge Phillip Becker ordered an indeterminate life term.

The Court of Appeals ruled that when the plea bargain breaks its promise made in a plea-bargain agreement, that means the defendant has pleaded guilty under false premise, and therefore the conviction cannot stand.

The court also ruled that was a "fundamental error" which requires Rutherford to be resentenced.

Sessions plans bill dropping 'C' average graduation rule

DRIGGS (AP) — Rep. John Sessions, R-Driggs, said he will introduce a bill to remove the high school graduation requirement that students earn a C average in basic courses.

Sessions said it may be "a little bit more than can be achieved by many students."

He said there are alternatives that might better achieve the rule's purpose to motivate students to learn more.

Educators in eastern Idaho said they don't like the rule either, but are worried that legislators not familiar with education could cause more problems.

The rule, which the state Board of Education placed in effect this academic year, requires students have a C average in 14 credits of English, reading, speech and math to graduate.

Sessions said he's most concerned about students who hover between the C and D grades.

"These students may be inclined to just drop out of school," Sessions, parents, teachers, school administrators, trustees and members of the State Board of Education share his concerns, he said.

At a December meeting, State Board of Education members voted 4-4 on a resolution calling for the rule to be rescinded for this year.

Some school districts said as many as 30 percent of their senior class last year would have graduated if the rule had been in effect.

Idaho Falls School District 91 officials have estimated remedial efforts for both the rule would cost about $18,000 in teacher salaries alone.

Sessions said another danger of the rule is a lowering of grading standards.

"A D grade would become practically nonexistent. All you'd have is Cs and Fs," Sessions said.

This would defeat the purpose of the bill.

Bill Stuart, District 91's director of secondary education, said he would have liked the state board act on its own since they know more about education than most legislators.

"I would prefer the Legislature to appeal to the state board to change the requirement rather than require them to do so," Stuart said. He said the Legislature could then act if the board refused the appeal.

"They need to work together."

Sessions suggested increasing admission standards at state universities so students with less than a C average couldn't get in until they raised their grades at a community college.

"This would preclude the dropping out of a lot of students and those students who couldn't get into a university would at least have a high school diploma."

"And if a person can't get a C average in high school, he has no business being in college anyway. Perhaps they would be better served in a vocational school."

Stuart said setting minimum scores on aptitude or proficiency tests would cause fewer problems than the C-average requirement.

Twin Falls teen hit by truck

TWIN FALLS — A teenager received minor injuries when he was hit by a truck at Filer and Locust streets Friday afternoon.

Todd Hayhurst, 16, of 2166 Falls Ave. E. sustained cuts to his face, reported Twin Falls police officer Dave Hickmann.

Shortly after noon, Hayhurst was crossing Locust Street with two other male companions when he was struck on the hip by a southbound truck approaching a green traffic light. The truck was driven by 45-year-old Gary L. Klesler of Shoshone, who stopped his vehicle at the intersection, Hickmann reported.

Hayhurst was treated at the scene and taken to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, where he was treated and released.

Sign worker injured in fall

JACKPOT, Nev. — A young Electric Sign Co. employee is in good condition after he was injured Thursday in a fall from a bucket on a crane truck.

Jeff Bickford fell about 25 feet while changing the message on a marquee in front of Caesars Palace's Casino shortly after noon, said casino publicist Carl Hayden. Bickford was transported by the Jackpot Ambulance Service to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center in Twin Falls.

A receptionist at Young Electric said Bickford was a long-time employee who was used to working in a bucket.

She said Bickford suffered broken bones in the fall and underwent surgery to repair an arm and an ankle.

Mechanics will be available to answer questions. The advice will be available to General Motors products and autos from other manufacturers, said William Peters, service manager for the auto agency.

The public is invited.

Trial slated in conditions case

BOISE (AP) — With negotiations providing no movement toward a settlement, a federal judge has set Feb. 4 for the beginning of a trial on allegations of unsafe and unconstitutional conditions at the state Youth Services Center in St. Anthony.

"I don't care much about your dancing and prancing between one another," U.S. District Judge Ray McNichols said in surprising attorneys for both the state and the Youth Law Center in San Francisco by setting a trial date.

After months of negotiations, the center finally filed suit earlier this year, charging the state with operating the juvenile detention facility under unsafe and unconstitutional conditions and providing less than adequate programs for its charges.

While state officials admit that some of the claims made by the center were at least partially valid in the past, they have contended that conditions have been improved to eliminate any unconstitutional situations.

Garn to receive space training

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tentative schedule has been prepared for Utah Sen. Jake Garn's first training sessions for his mission on a future space shuttle flight, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration says.

NASA officials said Garn will be assigned to a flight of the space shuttle sometime between March and August of this year.

The Republican lawmaker is scheduled Jan. 10 to fly to the Manned Space Flight Center in Houston for an altitude chamber test.

As a veteran military pilot, Garn already has qualified in the altitude chamber, but the test must be updated before further shuttle training can take place, NASA said.

From Jan. 14 to 17, Garn will undergo medical examinations, including a stress test on a treadmill, a parabolic high-altitude weightlessness flight aboard a KC-135 jet, and several training simulator sessions on various shuttle systems.

NASA said Garn will likely return to Houston in February for additional training, and also visit the Kennedy Space Center at Cape Canaveral, Fla.

Garn will be assigned to work as a utility crew member on the shuttle flight, including such duties as photography and housekeeping.

Black Catholic bishops ready to 'tell it on the mountain'

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Blacks in the Roman Catholic Church have been enriching "spiritual gifts" to give it, say its 10 black American bishops, and the time has come to "go and tell it on the mountain."

They say that signs abound that the black element of U.S. Catholicism has "come of age" and now has the responsibility "to share the gift of our blackness" with the whole church.

The challenge was set forth in an initially little-noticed but historic pastoral letter by the country's black Catholic bishops last fall, the first time they have jointly issued such a teaching document.

It didn't have a "widespread impact" at first, says Bishop Joseph L. Howze of Biloxi, Miss., but it now is in broader circulation and is getting increasing attention, with workshops and discussions about it.

Noting that the number of black bishops has increased fivefold since 12 years ago when he was one of only two of them, Howze says the letter represents strengthened confidence among the church's black leadership.

Auxiliary Bishop James P. Lyke of Cleveland calls the letter a "major document in black American Catholic history."

"In the way of enthusiasm, it's beginning to get more response," says Auxiliary Bishop Wilton D. Gregory of Chicago, who notes a third printing of the letter has been ordered, the total now approaching 50,000.

The bishops directed the letter specifically to their 1.2 million black Catholic "brothers and sisters," but emphasized the need for their talents to enhance the entire church, as well as ecumenically.

The overall "black church crosses denominational boundaries and is without a formal structure," but it is "a reality cherished by many black Christians," the bishops say.

They say it is a "result of our common experience and history" and although blacks are loyal to "their respective faith communities," they understand and appreciate each other "because of that common heritage."

"We as black Catholics are in a special position to serve as a bridge with our brothers and sisters of other Christian traditions" and to deepen "awareness of the whole black church," the bishops say.

They stress the special contributions that black spirituality can bring into the church-at-large, particularly the emphasis blacks always have put on the Bible, long before the revived attention to it in contemporary Catholicism.

"For our ancestors, the Bible was never a closed book," the letter says. Even when forbidden in slavery times, "the stories were told and retold in sermons, spirituals and shouts."

For blacks, the Scriptural story of redemption from bondage and travail "is our story," the letter says, adding:

"No one can understand so well the meaning of the proclamation that Christ has set us free than those who have experienced the denial of freedom ... This is the gift we have to share with the whole church."

The letter underlines special qualities of spirituality that stand out in black faith, including contemplative, holistic, joyful and communal.

By contemplative, "we mean that prayer is spontaneous and pervasive in the black tradition," the letter says. "Every place is a place for prayer." The sense of God's presence and power taught our ancestors that no one can run from him and no one need hide from him.

"Black spirituality has taught us what it means to 'let go' and to 'lean on God.' In an age of technology and human engineering, our spiritual heritage has never let us forget that God takes us by the hand and leads us in ways we might not understand."

By being holistic, the letter says black spirituality sees and feels the connection between intellect and emotion, spirit and body, action and contemplation, individual and community, sacred and secular.

"In keeping with our African heritage, we are not ashamed of our emotions. For us, the religious experience is an experience of the whole human being, both the feelings and the intellect, the heart as well as the head."

That attribute can help counter the "dehumanization brought about by a technocratic society," the letter says. "We can put back the human factor by rediscovering that 'the world is charged with the grandeur of God' and that 'the whole world is in his hands.'"

Concerning the "gift of joy," the bishops say, "the hallmark of black spirituality" is its celebrative aspect. "Celebration is movement and song, rhythm and feeling, color and sensation, exultation and thanksgiving."

"It is never an escape from reality, however harsh it may be. Indeed, this joy is often present even in the midst of deep anguish and bitter tears. This joy is a result of our conviction that 'in the time of trouble, he will lead me.' Looking at Jesus, we must burst forth into song that all might hear 'He's sweet I know.'"

"This gift of joy is something we must share," the bishops say, and it is "clearly needed in our time."

Varying complexion not

Congressmen's faiths reflect decisions

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

The U.S. Congress has a varying religious complexion which increasingly reflects interfaith breadth and which also is found by studies to have a subtle yet substantial effect on legislative decisions.

"It's an important factor that often is ignored," says Albert J. Menendez, who as research director of Americans United for Separation of Church and State compiled statistics on the religious makeup of the new Congress.

"The religious component gives an indication of what's happening to attitudes in various parts of the country and also has an influence on certain issues of religious concern."

A study by the Search Institute of Minneapolis, which examined religious views of a broad cross-section of Congress members, found that their votes on major public issues could be projected from their religious profiles.

Statistics on the religious makeup of the incoming 99th Congress, which goes to work Jan. 7, indicate it is a bit more devoutly attached than the previous Congress, at least in regard to specific denominational affiliation.

The number of those in Congress without a denominational affiliation dropped from five to only three, and the number classifying themselves as broadly as "Protestant" without specific affiliation, edged down one to 22.

'The religious component gives an indication of what's happening to attitudes in various parts of the country and also has an influence on certain issues of religious concern ...'
— Albert J. Menendez

The figures also showed that mainline Protestant denominations gained the most seats, while Roman Catholics and Jews just about held their own.

This was a slight switch from trends of recent years, in which Catholics have moved strongly into congressional prominence. So have Jews in comparison to their small part of the population, but the total of mainline Protestants previously slipped until last fall's elections.

Although Catholics remain the largest single denominational bloc, 142 of them in both houses, their ranks increased by only one this time, while the Jewish count remained the same at 38. However, Catholic and Jews won new seats in the deep South, traditionally Protestant.

Protestants now total 345 in both houses, and the biggest gains were made by Episcopalians, whose count rose to 67, up six. Baptists now number 49, up three, and United Methodists, totalling 76, increased three. Other denominations with sizable representation include the United Church of Christ now has 14 members of Congress, up one, but Lutherans shrunk to 23, down two, while Presbyterians stayed the same, at 56, as did Mormons, at 12, and Eastern Orthodox, at seven.

In numerical rank, next to the first-place Roman Catholics, come United Methodists, Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Baptists, Jews, Lutherans, United Church of Christ members and Mormons, in that order.

Episcopalians, with their strength in upper social and economic brackets, remain the biggest bloc in that similarly upper legislative branch, the U.S. Senate, 21 of the 100 senators being Episcopalians.

Catholics are second with 19 in that upper house, and United Methodists next with 14. There are 11 Baptists, eight Presbyterians, eight Jews, five members of the United Church of Christ. Other groups are fewer.

In the 435-member House, Catholics, at 123, remained the most numerous, with other groups following in this order: United Methodists, 62; Presbyterians, 48; Episcopalians, 46; Baptists, 38; Jews, 30 and Lutherans, 20. Other groups are fewer.

Altogether, only 21 religious groups were among those represented in either house of Congress, compared to 25 groups represented in the last Congress.

Most promising matrimonial match, it's said, is that of the youngest son in one family to the oldest daughter in another. Also considered a likely match is that of an oldest son to a youngest daughter. Our Love and War man regards these contentions as curiosities that sometimes prove valid.

Three women arrested at Trinity Lutheran Church are escorted into the county jail

Deputies burst into church, arrest supporters of pastor

By EARL BOHN
The Associated Press

CLAIRTON, Pa. — Sheriff's deputies splintered a door, rushed into a Lutheran church Friday and arrested seven of a jailed minister's supporters who had vowed not to be removed peacefully from the building they held in defiance of a county judge.

"There was no resistance whatsoever," Allegheny County Sheriff Eugene Coon said after the seven were brought from Trinity Lutheran Church to face the judge who had declared them in contempt four days earlier.

Claiming to be obeying God's instruction to preach against "corporate evil" on behalf of the unemployed, the group previously had displayed—bitch—bats—and gas masks and threatened to use "defensive violence" to hold the church—and the access to media attention it afforded them.

"There wasn't going to be any violence. That was all psychology," said Ron Welsen, United Steelworkers Local 1397 president and a tough-talking supporter of the Rev. D. Douglas Roth, as he watched the police action with other spectators from across a street.

Coon had said he would arrest anyone who interfered with the raid. The seven arrested included Nadine L. Roth, 33, the minister's wife. The 33-year-old pastor is serving 90 days in jail for civil contempt. Roth defied Judge Emil E. Narick's order to obey his bishop and step down as pastor of the congregation he polarized with anti-corporate, pro-labor rhetoric. Long-time members of the blue-collar congregation also contested his use of church funds to support labor activism.

Others arrested inside the church included Shipbuilders Local 61 President Darrell Becker, 34, who is feuding with Dravo Corp. of Pittsburgh over a protracted strike; Harry Dinkel, 65, vice president of Trinity Lutheran's council; Pamela J. Ramsey, 25, of Zellenople; and Rebecca L. Fosbrink, 38, of Clairton.

Two others—Paul M. Brandt, 34, of Pittsburgh, a member of Shipbuilders Local 61, and the Rev. William Rex, 36, a Lutheran minister from Monroeville—had been named as fugitives from criminal charges filed in connection with a disturbance at a Presbyterian church attended by officials of major Pittsburgh corporations, Coon said.

Def Leppard drummer loses his arm

SHEFFIELD, England (AP) — Surgeons amputated the left arm of rock star Rick Allen on Friday, four days after the arm was severed in a car crash and then sewn back in place, a spokeswoman for his recording company said.

Doctors reported there was a serious infection in the upper part of the arm where it had been reattached Monday, said Bernadette Coyne, a Phonogram Records spokeswoman.

"Because of the extent of the infection, there was no alternative but to amputate the arm," she said.

Allen, 21, drummer for the British band Def Leppard, was later reported in stable condition at the Royal Hallamshire Hospital, Ms. Coyne said.

He was brought to the hospital on New Year's Eve after the arm was ripped off in a high-speed crash near Sheffield, in northern England.

Police said the sports car Allen was driving failed to round a curve and overturned, catapulting him into a field.

Accused 'madam' requests release of records about her escort service

NEW YORK (AP) — Sydney Biddle Barrows, the alleged "Mayflower Madam," pleaded innocent Friday to running a prostitution ring, and demanded the release of records which she said will show the business was a legitimate escort service.

Miss Barrows, 32, and Lawrin Goulston, 26, also of Manhattan, appeared in court for arraignment on an indictment charging them with promoting prostitution in the third degree. Miss Goulston also pleaded innocent.

Assistant District Attorney Dennis Wade told acting state Supreme Court Justice Brenda Soloff that the records have been available since October. He described them as "detailed records concerning the prostitution ring run by the defendants."

Wade said the suspects could look at the documents and take notes but not make copies.

Defense attorney Mark Denbeaux said the documents were "too voluminous" to copy by hand. He denied there is any reference to prostitution in the documents and said Wade is illegally withholding the records because they prove Miss Barrows is innocent.

He called the arraignment "a travesty" and said Miss Barrows is being prosecuted to cover up mistakes by police of the Public Morals Division and because of her family background.

The judge told the lawyers to try to work out the dispute over the records and come to her again Jan. 18, when, if necessary, she will impose a solution.

The judge also reduced Miss Barrows' bail from $7,500 to $3,500 after Denbeaux argued that there is no indication Miss Barrows will try to flee.

She granted a similar request from Miss Goulston's lawyer, Stephen Hyman, and reduced her bail from $5,000 to $2,500.

Miss Barrows and Miss Goulston were arrested in October following a raid at 307 W. 74th St., the headquarters of three escort services — Elin, Cachet and Finesse.

Wallace's ex-wife given mental help

MOUNT VERNON, Ala. (AP) — Cornelia Wallace, ex-wife of Gov. George C. Wallace, was committed to a state mental hospital in mid-December and is responding well to treatment, a probate judge said.

Coffee County Probate Judge Marion Brunson said Thursday he ordered Mrs. Wallace sent to a mental hospital Dec. 14 at the request of her mother, Ruby Folsom Austin, and her brother, Charles Ellis Jr., both of Elba.

"I understand she has responded very well," Brunson said.

Mrs. Wallace, 44, had been living in Florida and was visiting her mother and brother in Elba when they asked the judge to hold a commitment hearing for her, he said.

"It was my observation that it was needed," Brunson told The Mobile Press Register. He said Mrs. Wallace "was nervous" but cooperative at the commitment hearing.

The probate judge said Mrs. Wallace was sent to Seaneys Hospital in Mount Vernon, but hospital officials would not confirm or deny her presence.

Utah gets even with Switzer

MIDVALE, Utah (AP) — Salt Lake County's mayors and commissioners have passed a resolution suggesting the Midvale sewage lagoon be named for Oklahoma football coach Barry Switzer.

Switzer's critical comments about Brigham Young University's No. 1 ranking in the Associated Press college football poll have won him infamy in the Beehive State.

Switzer, whose Sooners dropped to No. 6 in the final AP poll after being dethroned 28-17 in the Orange Bowl to No. 2 Washington, had ranked 13th in the AP poll because he felt the Mormon-owned school's schedule was easier than Oklahoma's.

On Thursday, the mayors and commissioners, meeting at the Salt Lake County Council of Governments, suggested the sewage facility in the suburban Salt Lake community be dubbed "The Barry Switzer Bowl."

West Jordan Mayor Dennis Randall jokingly made the motion, which to his surprise was seconded and passed.

The lagoon is operated by the South Valley Water Reclamation Facility, which in turn is controlled by cities represented on the governments' council.

The resolution was passed amid laughter, with only West Valley Mayor Gerald K. Maloney having a kind word for Switzer.

"Don't you think he got beat bad enough the other night?" he asked fellow council members.

The resolution was passed unanimously. Meanwhile, BYU officials learned Friday that the school is the odd-favorite to be named to play in the 1985 Kickoff Classic.

"If I was a betting man, BYU, if they wanted to go, is almost a shoe-in," said Col. John Clune, the Air Force Academy athletic director. "BYU is such an explosive team. They'd be a great choice."

The Kickoff Classic pairs two of the nation's top college football teams in the season's opening game in East Rutherford, N.J. Auburn and the University of Miami (Fla.) met in this past season's contest.

Clune said a decision on the two teams to play in the game will come in late February or early March.

He said Ohio State, Notre Dame, Oklahoma, Boston College, and Maryland are among the leading contenders to meet BYU, which was 13-0 this season and won the mythical national championship.

Ohio State is attractive because running back Keith Byars, second in the 1984 Heisman Trophy voting, returns for his senior year. BYU quarterback Robb Bosco, third in the Heisman vote, also will be a senior.

Washington, which defeated Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl and finished second in the final Associated Press Top 20 poll, is scheduled to play BYU during the 1985 season and wouldn't be considered as an opponent for the Cougars, Clune said.

High-powered Poky outguns Bruins, 74-59

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Power and speed. Those two ingredients became more evident as the game progressed Friday night when the Pocatello Indians burst into the fourth quarter to handle the Twin Falls Bruins 74-59 in the Gem State Conference boys' basketball opener for both teams.

The Indians, pre-season favorites to replace the Bruins at the top of the GSC, simply wore the Bruins down. And in the final seven minutes, they dominated, breaking away from a three-point advantage to pile up the margin.

"There was no question," confirmed Pocatello Coach Jerry Koester, "we had more left at the end."

But through the first three quarters, the Bruins battled hard to stay in contention. Craig Langley came up with two and one-half strong quarters for his best showing thus far and Doug Petersen and Matt Harr provided a lot of scoring. But the game was played in four quarters. Over the final half, Jason Meyerhoeffer, who missed several minutes while having a twisted ankle taped, hit 13 of the Bruins' final 27 points.

The difference was, Pocatello had four men in double figures and another with eight. "The Bruins couldn't find a finishing scoring kick. We were really beat physically," said Bruin Coach John Astorquia. "They beat us down court several times (for fast break layups) and they had 20 offensive rebounds. Twenty of those rebounds," he emphasized, "it seemed to me like they were getting three or four shots every time downcourt in the second half."

"I felt the major differences were the offensive rebounding that gave them the second and third tries and they were hitting their free throws there in the early part of the fourth quarter while we were missing ours," he said. "Rebounds and free throws or the lack of them."

Pocatello started out hot, hitting its first two buckets. But then Harr collected seven straight points — three on a howitzer — and the teams saw-sawed to a 17-15 Pocatello lead at intermission.

It appeared the game was starting to unravel in Twin Falls' collective face midway through the second period. Holding a 23-21 lead, Pocatello outscored the Bruins 12-2. During that span the Indians collected two fast break layups, another off a steal, two free throws and a follow shot.

That made it 35-23 but within two minutes Twin Falls had replied virtually in kind. Harr hit a three-point goal and then three free throws while

Wood River beats Burley for first time

HAILEY — A 15-0 burst that covered the first quarter pointed the Wood River Wolverines to a 68-44 decision over Burley's Bobcats Saturday night as the South-Central Idaho Conference season got under way for both teams.

Wood River, substantiating its No. 1 ranking by the league coaches, thus posted its first victory over ever the Bobcats. They also improved their season record to 9-2 with their seventh consecutive win.

The Bobcats are 4-5 on the year. "We were excited about this one," admitted Coach Dick Richel afterward. "I didn't have to beat the drums in the lockerroom to get them ready. But we also know that Burley had an off shooting night and that frustrated them a little and they made mistakes we don't expect to see the next time we play them."

The game was close only for an instant. With the scoreboard reading 22, Wood River started its break-away, paced by the scoring of John Mirsal and Dan Wells.

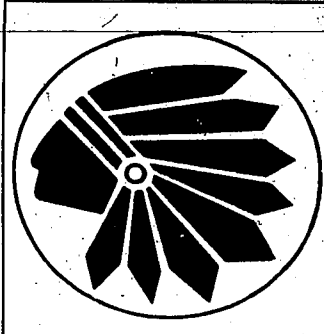

"I felt we played pretty good defense and caused some turnovers but they weren't shooting well. Richel said of that stretch."

Burley appeared to steady somewhat in the second quarter, nipping the deficit down to 10 points but that was the last charge. Wood River moved back on top by 20 at intermission and then hit the first four points of the third quarter. The game stayed in the 20-point area thereafter.

Canyon Shoshone outmuscles Solons, 44-31, in league showdown

By CHRIS HAFT
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — Though both teams initially played offense as if they were learning a new dance, the Shoshone Indians ultimately benefited from sustained defensive excellence to wait 10 a 44-31 Canyon Conference boys' basketball victory Friday night.

The Indians' effectiveness was particularly noticeable in the third quarter, when they limited Gooding to four points, and in the final period, when they allowed a mere six points in the first 7:19.

Shoshone thus remained undefeated in seven games and kept a share of the league lead with Glenn Perry at 2-0.

"They played really intense defense, and apparently we weren't ready to handle that," said Coach Lou Anderson, whose Senators fell to 3-3 overall, 1-1 in conference. "They forced us out of our offense and we couldn't get back in it."

After a catatonic beginning — the teams combined to score just six points during the opening six minutes — Gooding's Sven Swenson notched five quick points, giving the Senators an 8-7 first-quarter edge.

But Shoshone, the league's top-ranked team, kept the Indians' comeback in check by preventing the 6-7 center and his 6-8 front-line mate, Bryan Barry, from controlling action underneath.

"What we talked about was getting off and helping from the weak side when the ball got into Swenson and having the guards jam down and tie him up," Shoshone Coach Larry Messick said. "We also had to make sure the weak-side rebounder on the right screened Darvy off."

Shoshone also played determinedly on the perimeter, stifling Gooding guard Todd Simis. Each of Simis' smokes, sure movements, were dogged by Wade Cooper and Bart Harris, who held him to seven points.

Harris, handing a mere 6-7, worked with double teaming. "He'll go down and get his nose right in it," Messick said.

Which is exactly what Doran Duffin did in the third quarter. After missing three layups during the first half, the Shoshone was notched eight of his team-high 15 points, all three of his baskets coming after offensive rebounds. The 6-4 senior finished with 11 points, also a team-high figure.

Four of Duffin's points came in the middle of a 9-0 streak that pushed Shoshone's lead to 31-21 by the end of the third quarter.

Salt Lake City's Tim Rowland camped at three-point baskets with 15 seconds left in the period, establishing the 10-point difference.

The margin was the same, 37-27, halfway through the final quarter when Gooding failed on four straight chances to reduce the lead.

Fultons power No. 3 Pilots to 72-49 romp over Hornets

By SCOTT TUDEHOPE
Times-News writer

DECO — Big height produced big results Friday when Glenns Ferry overwhelmed Canyon Conference opponent Deco 72-49, a victory "promising Pilot" Coach Gordon Brown to say his club showed "a lot of depth."

Dave Fulton, the Pilots' 6-8 center, not only anchored an impenetrable 1-2 defense but also scored 10 points. The high scorer, however, was John Fulton, who cannot six field goals and four free throws for 20 points.

Also in double figures for Glenns Ferry was John Solosabal, with 15.

"We hope to get tougher as the year goes on," Brown said. "We should be pretty good up the end of the season, but I think one of our strengths is our bench. I feel good playing as many as nine guys a night."

Getting playing time was no problem if you had an orange Pilots jersey. On while limiting the Hornets to a four-point first quarter, Glenns Ferry's starters built a 16-point lead, expanded it to as much as 24 in the second period, then watched as reserves filled in. Both sides cleared the benches from about the four-minute mark in the final period when it was clear the Hornets weren't going to budge much from an established 20-point lead.

Deco was horribly cold from the field. Successful on just three of 35 shots from the field in the first half, the Hornets warmed up a bit in the second half, hitting 12 of 28. Still, the damage was done.

"We've never been that behind," said Deco Coach Ron Knowles of the first 15 minutes of play. "It looked like we were playing the game, instead of at home. We've got to get up for Shoshone (Deco's road opponent tonight)."

It was the Pilots' fourth straight win and puts their record at 5-1 overall and 2-0 in the league. Deco is now 4-3 and 1-1.

Holiday Bowl needs help, and quickly

With the hubbub surrounding Brigham Young's No. 1 ranking finally subsiding, a look should be taken at the element which caused much of the controversy in the first place: the Holiday Bowl. It needs fixing.

The game has definite assets. It's played in an excellent facility, San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium. Winter is usually pleasant in San Diego, so bowl officials don't have to worry about rain-thinned crowds. It began in 1978, just before the onset of the regrettable bowl boom, so it's at least somewhat recognizable to fans nationwide.

However, even Holiday Bowl officials can't contend that their source regarded on a level with prestigious games like the Rose, Orange or Cotton Bowls. In the minds of fans, media, college administrators and football denizens alike, the Holiday is embedded in a bowl substratum along with affairs like the Sun, Liberty and Peach. They may be influential and entertaining, but they're essentially mere preliminaries for the main events on New Year's Day.

No longer should the Holiday Bowl be content with secondary status. BYU's emergence as the nation's top-rated college football team signals that it's time for the Holiday Bowl to straighten its tie, press its suit and upgrade its image. If No. 1 teams, potential or otherwise, are going to play in the game, it must be worthy of them.

Only a few changes need to be made. They're substantial, but not unreasonable.

First, it should be held closer to New Year's Day. People are used to bowls occurring then. Playing on an odd Friday night which happens to fall near Christmas barely captures the attention of spectators. A Jan. 1 date is out of the question, given the unshakable tradition of the other bowls. But there's nothing wrong with Dec. 31 or 30.

Additionally, if the Western Athletic Conference champion has to be bound to participating in the Holiday Bowl each year, then the game's committee owes the WAC winner a challenging opponent — consistently. The up-and-coming Southern Methodist team which lost to BYU 46-45 in 1980 was a fine selection, as was

Ohio State two years ago (Buckeyes 47, BYU 17).

This year, however, the Holiday Partners really blew it by selecting the Michigan Wolverines, who had the game for them but reputation for an unranked 6-5 team against an undefeated No. 1 squad? If the Idaho High School Activities Association followed this logic, we'd see Kimberly regularly face Borah for the state football title. Sure, Michigan gave BYU a tough fight. Yet had the Cougars faced a more prominent foe, the argument over their standing in the polls would have been at least quieted, instead of fueled.

BYU and the WAC should be commended for keeping its commitment to the Holiday Bowl when everybody clamored for the Cougars to opt out of the game for Boston College in a "higher-visibility" duel. But the league can't be expected to stick with the present arrangement, particularly if one of its teams — BYU, apparently — is annually residing in the Top 20 or even the Top 5.

It's a simple matter of evolving and growing according to changing needs. The Holiday Bowl, if it wants to maintain credibility, must adapt.

The issue was never in doubt after the first few minutes as the Spartans raked up a 17-point lead by intermission.

"They turned to a zone in the second half and we stagnated in it but we still won by 14," said Coach Craig Wendell.

Minico travels to Pocatello to test Highland tonight while Blackfoot will remain in Magic Valley to play the Bruins at Twin Falls.

The Spartans are 4-2 for the season, while Blackfoot fell to 3-3 this year.

Hagerman's Troy Rogers canned 7 for 9 from the charity stripe in the last five minutes to vault Hagerman out in front in the final minutes.

The loss was the first of the season in conference play for the Panthers, now 4-1 in Northside games and 5-3 for the year. Camas improved its record to 7-6 for the year and 2-4 in conference.

The lead changed hands throughout the contest, with the Huskers holding a 17-16 half-time advantage and Carey leading 31-29 at the end of the third quarter. After Camas took the lead at 42-41, the Panthers had three opportunities and the free throw line and missed all of them.

Dodi Youren of Carey led all players with 18 points, while Lemons topped the Huskers with 14.

ASU's status with Pac-10 questioned

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Arizona State University reportedly could be ejected from the Pacific-10 Conference for violations which prompted recent penalties imposed by the conference, but Athletic Director Dick Tamburo says he has had no such word from conference officials.

"Some people in the league want to kick them out," the Phoenix Gazette said Friday, quoting unidentified sources within the conference, who do not represent the Pac-10's official body, the Presidents Council.

"You get so many speeding tickets, and pretty soon you get your license lifted," the Gazette quoted one source as saying.

Another source said Arizona State officials had been warned by conference officials that "one more screw-up, and..." the Gazette said.

Midway through the final period, Hagerman held to a precarious one-point lead before the 6-2 Pirate came through at the line.

Aside from freethrow heroics, Hagerman managed a tough yet nearly foul-free defensive effort to snag the contest.

"That was the key — we played the best man-to-man defense we have all year," said Hagerman Coach Randy Clark. "We only had nine fouls all night and were still aggressive."

Hagerman also held Bliss' big man, Larry Wilkins, to 12 points on the night.

Jerome 69-Buhl 60

JEROME — Three Jerome players scored in double figures Friday night, but a stubborn Buhl defense held off the 69-60 South-Central Idaho Conference boys' basketball victory.

The win put Jerome all alone atop the SCIC with a 3-0 conference record. Jerome is 5-4 for the season.

The Tigers rolled to a 19-12 first-quarter lead, but Buhl trimmed that margin to two points, a 26-24 at halftime. Jerome went on a 26-point scoring binge in the third quarter, but missed 15 possible points at the free throw line in the final period allowing the Indians to get back into the game.

Jeff Burnham paced the Tigers with 19 points, 10 of them in the third quarter, while Torrey Sheets chipped in 14 and Shaun Ball 11.

The loss dropped Buhl to 0-2 in conference and 2-7 for the season.

Aluminum makers call power rates threat

By DAVID STAATS
The Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — The Northwest's aluminum manufacturers, faced with a sagging worldwide market that has kept prices low, are taking on the Bonneville Power Administration and the region's utilities in a battle the companies say could decide their fate.

Rate increases totaling 800 percent over the last five years have shocked the aluminum industry, the most intensive user of electricity of any American heavy industry. Much of the increase is to pay for the Washington Public Power Supply System's nuclear plants, which received federal financial backing through the BPA.

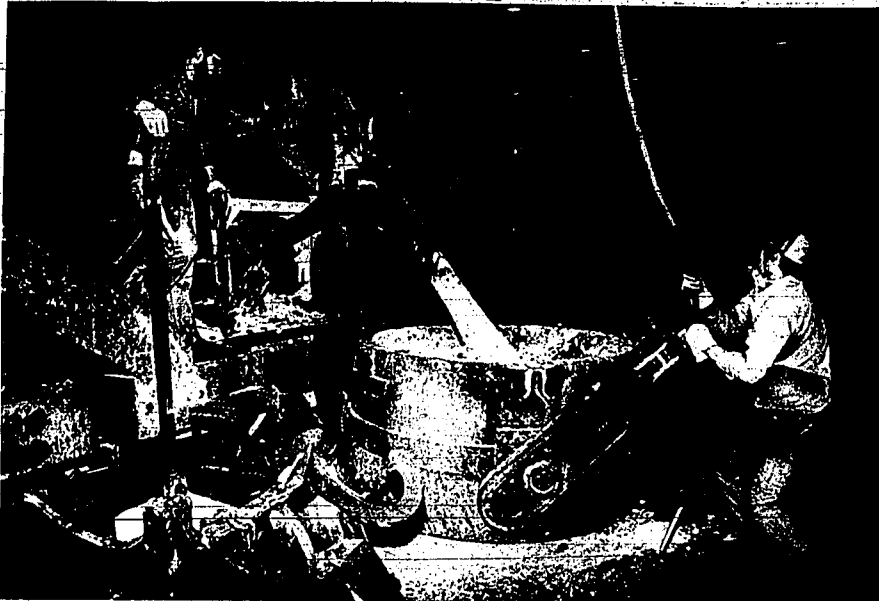

Over two or three years, aluminum plants in Oregon, Washington, and Montana have lost their status as constant suppliers and been forced into the role — already shared by most other U.S. plants — of "swing" plants that are quick to reduce operations when their companies must cut back production. Workers who once had sound jobs now face periodic layoffs lasting up to a year or more.

This month, Martin Marietta Corp., furthering its announced intention of getting out of the aluminum business, is closing its smelter in the Dallas, dismissing 200 people. The plant underwent a $42-million renovation seven years ago and was considered efficient.

Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Corp. has called off a $600-million modernization program for its Spokane, Wash., plant. Plans by Alumax Inc. to build a $600-million smelter near Umatilla died in February when the company missed a BPA deadline to sign a long-term contract for the power the plant would have needed.

"If power costs escalate and the market does not rebound, I'm reasonably certain the industry will die in the Pacific Northwest," said Frank H. Fisher, Martin Marietta's general manager of Northwest operations.

Aluminum now sells for about 46 cents a pound on the London Metal Exchange. A consultant's report for the aluminum companies said production costs of Northwest plants average 55 cents a pound. Meanwhile, foreign competition is stiffening from Canada, Brazil, Australia and other countries, many of which subsidize natural-resource development.

Stewart Spector, editor of The Spector Report, a New York forecasting service, said prices should rise in 1985, giving relief to U.S. aluminum manufacturers.

If power rates continue to climb, however, the United States will depend increasingly upon imported aluminum as smelters close and no new ones are built, Spector said.

Northwest industry officials agree their survival depends upon rate decisions the BPA makes in the next six months. "It's completely in Bonneville's hands," said Brett Wilcox, executive director of Direct Sales Industries Inc.

DSI is an association representing aluminum and other companies that buy power wholesale directly from the BPA. Most residential and business customers obtain the federal agency's relatively cheap Columbia River hydropower through utilities acting as retailers.

The Public Power Council, which represents 118 public utilities, dislikes BPA's efforts to help the manufacturers and discounts the aluminum industry's woes as short-term.

"We don't really anticipate that all the DSI's would leave in any case," said Lincoln Wolverton, director of technical projects.

"There are some pretty efficient plants," and there are some real electricity dinosaurs," such as Alcoa's Vancouver, Wash., plant, Reynolds Metals Co.'s Troutdale, Ore., plant, and Kaiser's Spokane plant, that might close, he said.

"The real problem with the aluminum companies is the price of aluminum," Wolverton said. "If the price were to go back up to 75 or 85 cents a pound, they're all going to be operating reasonably well."

The 10 plants in the region, including the one in the Dallas, normally employ about 12,000 people with a $400 million payroll, according to DSI. They have one-third of the nation's aluminum production capacity and about 15 percent of the world's.

"This really is the aluminum capital of the world," Wilcox said. The first plants were built in the 1940s, when the government wanted both wartime production capacity and an outlet for power from BPA dams built beginning in the 1930s.

For nearly four decades, power costs remained well below the nation's average. Aluminum companies signed 20-year BPA contracts guaranteeing them low prices.

When rates rose as the BPA began charging its customers for the WPSS plants, however, power consumption dropped. The agency's revenues dropped — and it responded with further rate increases to compensate.

Politics also penalized the companies. In 1980, Congress passed the Northwest Power Planning Act. One of its provisions called for the BPA to trade some of its cheap power for more expensive electricity produced at plants owned by Northwest private utilities.

That provision was intended to let private-utility customers share some of the rate breaks public utilities got with BPA power. But the aluminum companies were told to foot most of the bill.

They agreed in order to get new long-term contracts, said Ed Mosey, chief spokesman for the power-marketing agency. At that time, authorities predicted energy shortages in the 1980s. Some environmentalists and congressmen favored cutting off aluminum companies as an alternative to building nuclear power plants, he said.

But the power shortage never materialized. And power costs soared.

"They never dreamed it was going to cost them what it did," Mosey said. "They would have been in a tremendous bargaining position now had they not signed those contracts."

The companies say they have pumped $500 million since 1981 into subsidies for lower residential rates. Moreover, since 1979, their electricity costs have risen from 31 cents per kilowatt hour to 2.49 cents.

Meanwhile, 1982 and 1983 were the worst years in the industry's regional history. Production early in 1983 was less than 50 percent of capacity, Wilcox said.

Despite their growing instability, smaller jobs still are desired for their high pay. General laborers at the Troutdale plant start at $11.50 an hour, and experienced workers average about $31,000 a year, Moffatt said.

One Saturday last spring, 1,600 people showed up when Reynolds announced 20 openings in the Troutdale plant.

Two of the Troutdale potlines — long lines of rectangular, covered pots in which aluminum oxide is charged with electricity to burn off the oxygen molecules — since have closed, with 230 of the plant's 550 employees laid off. It will cost Reynolds about $1 million to restart each potline, Moffatt said.

The BPA is considering offering long-term rates tied to aluminum prices, rate reductions in exchange for interruptible power supplies, and access to cheap British Columbia hydropower to help the companies.

Occidental-Diamond Shamrock may be next oil merger

By ROGER GILLOTT
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Occidental Petroleum Corp. and Diamond Shamrock Corp. announced Friday that they are considering a merger.

If approved, the corporate marriage would form the nation's seventh largest oil company.

One source close to the parties, who spoke only on condition that he not be identified, said it was "an unannounced fact that Occidental would either acquire or merge with Diamond Shamrock."

In a joint statement, the companies said only that they "are engaged in discussions looking toward a possible business combination."

The companies said directors would meet Monday to consider the proposal and that "a further announcement is expected to be made shortly thereafter."

The terse announcement confirmed Wall Street speculation that erupted earlier Friday after Occidental Petroleum and Diamond Shamrock both asked the New York Stock Exchange to suspend trading in their stock pending news announcements. On Thursday, Occidental Petroleum closed at $26.75 a share and Diamond Shamrock finished at $17.75.

The action came just one day after Occidental-Petroleum's 86-year-old chairman, Armand Hammer, in a wide-ranging interview with The Associated Press, revised his previous prediction that a spate of oil-industry mergers had "run their course."

Although he gave no hint of a deal with Diamond Shamrock, Hammer said he expected more takeovers because oil reserves are limited and "it is cheaper to buy new reserves on Wall Street than to discover them yourself."

He said the cost of finding new oil is $12 per barrel. According to figures released last year by Texaco Inc., prices paid in three recent huge industry takeovers ranged from $4.69 a barrel to $6.48 a barrel for reserves of oil and oil equivalent.

Diamond Shamrock knows first-hand how expensive looking for oil can be. In 1983, it posted a net loss of $56.2 million because of a $194.3 million pre-tax writoff of its entire investment in the highly touted Mukluk well in the Beaufort Sea off the coast of Alaska. Diamond Shamrock and its partners lost $1.6 billion on the project, which turned out to be the most expensive dry hole in history.

Hammer also said he expects Congress to pass legislation limiting such oil-industry mergers on antitrust grounds.

"It's just a question of what comes first — the mergers or the legislation," Hammer said.

A takeover would give Occidental Petroleum control of Diamond Shamrock's proved reserves of 120.2 million barrels of oil and natural gas liquids and 915.2 billion cubic feet of natural gas.

The BPA also has proved reserves of 1.217 billion barrels of oil and natural gas liquids and 3.32 trillion cubic feet of natural gas.

Deep red ink Reagan's 'Scarlet Letter'

NEW YORK — It is Reagan's "Scarlet Letter."

That is how John H. Filer recently described the federal budget deficit, which some supporters of President Reagan consider a sin against conservatism that, unrepented, could stain his other accomplishments.

Filer, who recently retired as chairman of Aetna Life & Casualty Co., believes the president will correct the deficits and return to the community of proper conservatives rather than see Republicans shipped in 1988.

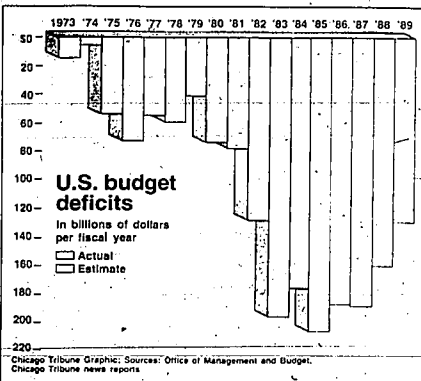

To carry the comparison with Nathaniel Hawthorne's Scarlet Letter might be going a bit far, but Filer's reasoning, revealed in a speech being distributed by his former company, depicts a vague, perhaps amusing, comparison.

In the Hawthorne novel, Hester Prynne, an adulteress, illustrates the author's view that sin results in a downward, tightening spiral of misfortunes, and suggests that absolution is obtained by rejoining the community and accepting its mores.

As Filer views Reagan, the president and his advisers "will want to give the Republican Party every chance of staying in power past 1988," and therefore will do all they can to get the deficit down to acceptable size.

"As the negative aspects of deficits become even clearer, and the substantial political momentum for deficit reduction will become a juggernaut," said Filer in his talk to the Hong Kong Management Association.

"The Republicans, and especially the president, will need to be seen in the forefront in accomplishing the Chicago Tribune Graphic. Sources: Office of Management and Budget, Chicago Tribune news reports.

John F. Filer

compelling national goal of stemming the flow of red ink," he told his audience.

Reagan, he believes, also wants to go out a hero, a man in the good graces of not just his own party but in the hearts of all voters. And neither he nor Hester Prynne, he suggests, can be accepted while wearing a scarlet letter on the chest for all to see.

If nothing is done about the deficits, and if current projections have credibility, Filer says, the Reagan years will result in nearly a 150 percent increase in U.S. federal indebtedness.

To put it more precisely, "In eight years, Ronald Reagan will have presided over a substantially bigger debt increase than occurred during the previous 204 years of our Republic," says Filer.

Reagan, he says, has been lucky so far. "To date, he has not had to deal with any of the most unpleasant side effects of excessive government deficits — sinking currency, soaring interest rates, and escalating inflation."

But, he continues, "I doubt very much his luck can hold for another four years." If his luck turned, that is, he would risk being branded scarlet. Filer reasons that Reagan simply wouldn't accept that fate and that, instead, he will return to the fold. Filer believes, moreover, that Congress finally will accept the necessity for spending cuts, however painful.

"Persuasion in the matter of deficit reduction has moved well past the question of 'should it be done' to 'how will we do it?'" says Filer, adding: "The special interests that have so effectively prevented any major breakthrough thus far will be much less potent in 1985 than they have been during the protracted political season prior to the election."

He concludes: "The circumstances should be right for the leaders of Congress and the president to begin to treat the broad national interest on the matter of deficit reduction."

That is, he suggests, the president and Congress are ready to practice greater fiscal responsibility — now, before the threatened downward spiral of economic events brands the administration in scarlet.

John F. Filer is business analyst for The Associated Press.

Stock prices slump 3rd straight session

By CHET CURRIER
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stock prices slumped again Friday.

It was their third straight loss since the beginning of the new year.

Some computer and other technology issues sustained notable losses in a session of quiet trading.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 21.75 points in the first two sessions of the year, dropped another 4.86 to 1,184.96.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange came to 77.48 million shares, down from 88.88 million Thursday.

News Thursday of a 4.3 percent rise in factory orders — during November provided an upbeat signal for production activity in the early stages of 1985. But it stirred little enthusiasm for stocks.

"Prices of government bonds dropped about $5 for every $1,000 in face value in Friday's activity as long-term interest rates rose. Honeywell fell 1 1/2 to 56 1/2.

On the issue of issuing a forecast of higher revenue and earnings for 1985 on Thursday, the company said it saw "cautionary signals in the economy."

Digital Equipment dropped 3 1/2 to 105. Digital said rumors that it was laying off some workers were untrue.

Elsewhere, Diamond Shamrock rose 3 to 20 1/2, and Occidental Petroleum dropped 2 to 24 1/2, after both issues were delayed in opening for several hours. The two companies said they were engaged in merger talks.

Scovill climbed 2 1/2 to 43 1/2. An investor group said it raised its offer for the company's stock from $35 to $42.50 a share.

Gold-mining issues were weak as the price of gold closed below $390 on the Commodity Exchange in New York for the first time in more than 2 1/2 years. ASA Ltd. was down 1/4 at 46; Homestake Mining 1/4 at 20 1/2; and Campbell Red Lake Mines 1/4 at 16 1/2.

In the daily tally on the Big Board, about four issues declined in price for every three that advanced. The exchange's composite index lost .45 to 94.80.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in these stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 96.89 million shares.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials fell .80 to 182.24. S&P's 500-stock composite index was down .89 at 183.82.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market slipped .22 to 246.19. At the American Stock Exchange, the market-value index closed at 202.21, down .56.

THE ACES®

BOBBY WOLFF

"I would rather be an opportunist and float than go to the bottom with my principles round my neck."

—Stanley Baldwin.

Most-Easts would opt for the routine play against today's game. And South would score 11 tricks. Boyce Holleman of Guilford, Miss., made an opportunist play, holding South to only seven tricks.

South ducked the first spade and won the second to isolate Holleman's known long suit. South led a heart to dummy to take a diamond finesse, and it was time for East's finesse play.

What happens if East plays a routine defense? South finesesses his nine to West's jack and the defense is finished. The diamonds will now run and South makes 11 tricks.

On the first diamond from dummy, Holleman seized his opportunity to make life miserable for South. He played his king instead of the deuce.

South couldn't afford to refuse the king. If he did, Holleman's spades would run. On the other hand, South couldn't afford to win the ace and cash his queen. If he did, and the jack didn't drop, he would be left with only eight tricks.

South made the most reasonable play—possible—by winning his ace and returning to dummy to lead another diamond. Playing Holleman for K-J-2, he finessed his nine to West's jack and, instead of winning one, South bravely went down two tricks.
